Taproot

Free Membership Program Terms

Version 1
Effective November 23, 2026

Summary of changes: Explains the creator's responsibilities and Taproot's role for free membership publication and access.

These terms apply between Taproot IO, LLC and the creator who publishes a free membership on Taproot. They supplement the Terms of Service and the Community Guidelines . You must expressly accept these terms before publishing a free membership.

What you can offer

You can offer a free membership on a site with an eligible Taproot site license. Members pay nothing to join or remain in this membership. Tell them what access or benefits they receive, who provides them, and how to contact you. Keep that information and your site's Member Terms accurate and available when a member joins.

Keep the free offer separate from any paid offer. Any paid membership must be a separate eligible offering with its own terms and the member's separate agreement. Joining a free membership gives you no authority to charge the member.

Your responsibilities

You provide the content, access and benefits you describe. Answer questions about those benefits and tell members when you change or end the offering. You are responsible for the way you use member information you receive, including explaining your practices to members and honoring their rights. Use member information consistently with your notices and the Terms of Service.

Taproot provides the tools to publish the membership, present the applicable terms, record acceptance and manage access. The Privacy Notice describes how Taproot uses information in doing so.

Availability and changes

Your site's license, its membership limits and the status of your site govern whether you can publish a free offer and accept members. Taproot may limit or stop use of the feature under the Terms of Service and Community Guidelines. Free membership access may end if a membership or the site ends, or if the site is no longer eligible. Follow the Terms of Service for changes and notices.
